Mississippi Senator Grills Capital Men Good Naturedly, But Admits Liking Them.

In good humored raillery, Senator grilled the members of the Washington Traffic Club last night at the annual dinner of that organization, at which he was the principal speaker. Senator Williams declared that in spite of the fact that the American railroads killed more people than war did and charged more for short hauls than for pretty well, and he had a positive liking for the transportation men in general and the Washington traffic men in

A feature of the dinner was the Washinfton Traffic Club Short Line' railroad. A train on this road, consisting of a Pullman and an observation car, ran up and down the toastmaster's table and stopped at the plate of the speaker next to be called on. A conductor-brakeman-porter, all in one, with lantern and flag, had charge of the train. Before the speaking was over the duties of this official became so arduous that he threatened to strike. A compromise was effected, however, and he service continued.

Advises High Ideals.

Odell S. Smith, of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Company, was the first speaker, in answer to the question, "Why Am I Here?" Mr. Smith gave several explanations as to his ice and then drew from beneath the table a manuscript which he said contained but 500 pages and which he believed he could read in three hours, at least. When the members discovered that the pages were blank a sigh of re lief was heard all over the room.

Mr. Smith, after the pleasantries were over, spoke in serious vein, declarling that the young railroad men of today would be the railroad leaders of the ment decade, and advising them all to hit or wagons to stars and work with the highest ideals possible. Ideals, he said were the foundation of any mainless and the man with ideals and ideas was bound to succeed of he worked as the members of the traffic club worked.

Consersiman Campbell of Kansas defended the railroads from the good humored attacks of the Senator from disassedud, saying that when he thought of the hard times the early railroaders had in the West when they started is build, and when he remembered the improvement they brought to the West, he could never find it in his heart "to cuss them."

SCOTS OF CAPITAL HONOR POET BURNS

St. Andrew's Society Celebrates With Songs. Memorial Poems, and Speeches.

More than 100 Scotchmen, inspired by "wee nippie" of hot Scotch, a plate of haggis, and plenty of Burns' eminiscences, made their exit from Rauscher's at an early hour today. This exit followed the stag banquet which once had threatened to split the St. Andrew's Society.

No fair maids of Dundee, or Washington, for that matter, attended that dinner last night. It was strictly male and all because some of the society wanted a drap of "auld Scotch." only thing feminine about the affair was now and then a stray thought for the wife and bairns at hame. Here and there a guest surreptitiously put a piece of white heather in his pocket and ordered the waiter to bring a wee bit more o' the oatcake so that the bonnie lass at home might have a me

Had Their "Auld Scotch."

But not to stray too far from the subect dear to the hearts of every clansman-the auld hot Scotch. It was there sure enough in steaming pitchers. Men, who never before had tasted the delicious brew of the land of Burns, declared that it was a most wonderful digestive tonic. It soothed them, and warmed their hearts for the poetic speeches after dinner, And never a man there had aught to say against the stag

"A woman is only a woman, but gude auld Scutch is a drink" was the slogan of the night. So the women were Haggis, a dish related to American hash, but containing oatmeal—all cooked in the stomach of a sheep—was one of the features of the splendig dinner. Real Scotch heather, brought here by "Uncle Dan" Fraser was another, and Scotch oatcake and, above all, the "hot Scotch," were others.

Singing and Pipes. President George Mann, of Baltimore

Society, gave Burns' address "To the Haggis," and then everybody went to it. John Anderson of Baltimore, Thomas Evans Greene and Richard Backing sang the lilting melodies of Burns, whose birthday the society was observing. Harry W. Howard was accom panist and Hugh Urguhart was piper.

panist and Hugh Urguhart was piper.

After dinner inspiring addresses were given by members of Congress and Scotchmen of the District.

Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, a clansman frac Ayreshire, the land of "Afton Water," had a word for the neighborly spirit of the Scotch and likewise a word for their persistent, fighting characteristics in tilmes of need. He wished that Bobby Burns, master of sarcasm, love, philosophy and friendship, might take to task the people of today who attack Congress as a band of pickpockets. Of President-elect Wilson he said that the persistence and fighting spirit of the Scotch was inherent and he wished for him that he might never do wrong. Senator Nelson Also Scotch. Senator Nelson Also Scotch.

Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesots refered to the guests as "fellow Scotchmen" and responded to the toast "The King," He said the United States' system of government lacks elasticity
